

Orange County solar power program meeting set

Orange County will host an information session in Apopka about its new solar-co-op program that is now open and will run through mid-June 2018.

The information session will take place Monday, June 4, at 6 p.m. John Bridges Community Center, 445 W. 13th St., Apopka.

Orange County is again partnering with Solar United Neighbors of Florida to bring a new solar co-op to residents of west Orange County.

Solar co-ops provide bulk discounts of up to 20 percent for a group of homeowners interested in purchasing solar panels. As part of a solar co-op, each participant signs an individual contract with the group-chosen installer, and all participants benefit from the discount. All homeowners who reside in west Orange County, including in-city jurisdictions, are eligible to participate in their respective co-op.

Earlier this year, more than 150 residents of east Orange County formed a co-op and selected Gold-in-Solar to serve the group. Members of that co-op are now in the process of signing contracts with the installer.

Orange County launched its first solar co-op in the summer of 2016 with 515 participants. Of those households, 79 installed solar through the co-op, accounting for 702.83 kW of new solar capacity in the county. In addition, $1.3 million was invested in solar with this co-op with a total energy savings over a lifetime of solar array of $3.5 million. Orange County Mayor Teresa Jacobs and her family were among the 79 households who joined this first solar co-op.

Solar power also supports Jacobs' goals in her sustainability initiative "Our Home for Life," which seeks to reduce barriers to alternative energy and increase renewable energy production by 10 percent in 2020 and 25 percent by 2040.

Joining a co-op does not obligate members to purchase panels. The exact price of a Photovoltaic (PV) system is dependent on homeowners' preference in system size and their home's energy consumption. Homeowners have the option to install the size PV system that fits their budget.

As part of this initiative, Orange County streamlines the permitting process for solar installations. New solar permits can be processed in a single day.

Waha: Objection states customer, not baker 'owns' message

lips has served gay customers while declining requests for lewd, Halloween, and divorce-themed cakes. He chooses projects based on their themes, not the customer's protected status. Yet, Colorado dismissed this rationale as a "distinction without a difference." The state's failure to recognize Phillips' reasoning seems unjustified, especially when it acknowledged other bakers' autonomy to decline objectionable proposals.

Another tack to deny Phillips protection insists that cake is food, not speech. George Will thinks cake can be "food for thought," but is food foremost. Milbank chimes wryly that ordinary consumers see cake as dessert, if not breakfast when in "muffin form." These columnists are saying that because an item has one function, it can't have another. This unserious logic would compel students to pledge and athletes to stand because flags are for saluting, not protesting. It's a false dilemma. What's more, same-sex marriage proponents rejected teleological dogmatism pre-Obergefell, but embrace it now.

A better objection admits that although cakes can be expressive, it's the customer, not the baker, who "owns" the message. To prove this point, one symposium contributor at SCOTUS blog invites us to imagine a bossy wedding photographer dictating how the ceremony must transpire, even down to what words must be said. But this falsely supposes that commercial artists are totalitarian czars or else dispassionate technicians — what another contributor calls mere "conduits of expression."

Wedding-service providers aren't Ayn Randian egoists aiming to exchange services with cold stoicism. Rather, common experience affirms that warm smiles and effusive affirmations are their trademark. More than conduits and less than czars, wedding artists are collaborators who consent to work with their customers' celebratory visions.

Ultimately, who owns or originates a message is irrelevant to why the Constitution bars speech compulsion. Phillips' petition quotes Barnette that the point is to protect the private citizen from uttering "what is not in his mind."

On this basis, the Supreme Court protected from punishment not just students from saying the Pledge, but an automobile owner who covered up the state motto "Live Free or Die" on his license plate. Hardly anyone would attribute either of these messages to their respective speakers.

Still, one might say that as a commercial bakery, Masterpiece Cakeshop is bound by public accommodation laws. But commercial artists enjoy broad speech protection. Phillips argues that cake baking satisfies the same court test that protects commercial tattooing as art. Both are visual arts, each entailing a design process inseparable from its end product. This process is vulnerable to compulsion because it involves the "subtle shaping of thought." Forcing others to think certain thoughts or express certain sentiments violates their autonomy and dignity.

Given these strong threads of Phillips' argument, what explains his opponents' dismissiveness?

Sociologist James Davison Hunter once observed: The capacity of a social group or movement to make its particular preferences and practices seem natural is the key to its control; these particularities become standard throughout society while shrouded in a cloak of neutrality.

Phillips' critics try to pass off their preference for coercing religious conservatives as common sense. But ignoring reasonable distinctions, getting dogmatic about the telos of cakes, and imagining artists as dispassionate robots are hardly sciences. These moves fail to justify stripping wedding-cake bakers of their speech protections, especially while culture wars rage.

Corbeil: I'm sure the Lord is keeping Jason busy preparing

Things you said can never be replaced
Some so funny you had to laugh
We lived to see what you would do next
We had special days and special times
Just a quiet moment or a simple ride
Just one last touch, a hug a hearing his voice, we all desire
You made it all so special each time
You liked to tease; you would not cease
Till you get a reaction then you were pleased
That was just you and you loved it

Not much money did you have
But you said you were rich, "Just look what I have My family, my property, and my wife!"
What a man, this father of mine
But now he is gone, no more to see
But I will just bet heaven can be found
Just look around, his memories you will see
And above all I know he is waiting with all who went before him!
Love you, Dad, thinking of you always!

My wife and I knew him as a loving son and our appliance repairman, heating and air conditioning maintenance chief, electrician, auto repair specialist, plumber, floor tile installer, painter, groundskeeper, carpenter, etc., etc., and most important, a fellow in Jesus.
And, I'm sure the LORD is keeping him busy in preparation for the end times.
Jesus said, "In my house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you." John 14:2.

Love: Event will offer much information to get ready for hurricane season

at 1101 Bear Crossing Dr., Orlando. This free, half-day event will offer hurricane preparedness information as well as items such as weather radios and first aid kits (while supplies last).

Those in attendance will be given the chance to speak with emergency personnel and recovery experts from the Orange County Office of Emergency Management. Representatives will be there to answer questions and provide information on how to respond to flooding, high-wind damage and property loss. Participants will also learn how to track storms, pack a disaster kit and prepare an emergency plan for themselves and their pets.

Prospective attendees can watch a short announcement for the event here: <https://bit.ly/2smj9Ag>. In addition, for questions or additional information, residents can call 407-836-9140, email at ocoem@ocfl.net or visit www.ocfl.net/storm.

Orange County's webpage (www.ocfl.net/storm) for emergency preparedness offers information on: hurricane preparedness; emergency communications; disaster preparedness; storm assistance; storm repair and permit information; emergency medical services and special needs; emergency alerts and mobile apps; and news and information (Orange County Newsroom). In terms of disaster preparedness, Orange County provides resources that families, individuals and businesses can use to develop their own plans to prepare in the event of a hurricane. It is also highly recommended that disaster plans include supplies and a course of action for pets. Orange County's OCFLAlert, OCFL 311 and OCFL News apps are available for free for download on Apple and Android devices. For more information on what each app has to offer, please go to <https://bit.ly/2LLMKwa>.

With hurricane season upon us, I highly recommend that you take action now in preparing yourself, your family, and your business so that you are ready in the event that Orange County endures any hurricanes this year.

The Vietnam Wall attracts thousands everywhere it appears.

Wall: It will be available to public 24 hours a day

November 1-5, according to the Traveling Memorial Wall website.

Created and sponsored by the Vietnam and All Veterans of Brevard, of Melbourne, the Traveling Memorial Wall travels the eastern half of the United States, from central Texas and Iowa eastward all the way up to the Canadian border, said wall manager Doc Russo.

The organization created its own wall after another one the group contracts annually for a veterans reunion failed to show up one year. Since this launch, the wall has experienced great success. It gets booked at least two years in advance, with its current timetable running through 2020.

"We decided to build our own," Russo said. "Once we built it, the phone calls started to come in to get us to travel with it, so we do."

The Rotary Club is offering a plethora of volunteering opportunities. Thirty volunteers are needed to help install the wall on November 7. Another 30 are necessary to disassemble it on Monday, November 12.

Then other volunteer groups are being sought out to staff the wall, taking four-hour blocks during the round-the-clock schedule. They will assist visitors with name searching, counseling information and support lending, Spiegel said. Police security will still be on the premises, and the wall will be lit up.

Though the Rotary Club would have to raise about $15,000 for the wall and its infrastructure, the wall is not a fundraiser in itself, but "more of a service for the community," Spiegel said.

"We're not trying to figure out a way to use the wall to make money," he said. "The Fall Family Festival itself stands on its own, but we thought that this would be a good feature even if we have to lend our financial support to bring it to the community."

Anyone interested in being a volunteer, sponsor or exhibitor for the festival and the Traveling Memorial Wall can visit www.fallfamilyfestival.com.
